will provide the detail of micro and macronutrients, which may help in synthesis of secondary metabolite content. Soil study also helps in developing agricultural practices, which ultimately helps in improving the income of the farmer. In-vitro activity helps in the development of herbal formulations in future.

Expected outcome of the proposed work

1. Quality control data as per API for batch to batch consistency of raw material.
2. To know the season of collection for yielding high quantity of phytochemical and secondary metabolite content.
3. Soil analysis will help in developing agricultural practice for these plants.

INTRODUCTION :

An ever increasing human population causes severe threat to earth as well as our environment in various ways. To fulfill the demands of food, shelter and other necessities there is continuous growth of different industries. On one side they are filling our demand but on an other side they causing adverse effect to environment as they are emitting a huge amount of different pollutants in air, in soil and in aquatic ecosystem as well.

Our main economy is based on industrialization, modernization of agriculture and development of science and technology. In order to produce much productivity from crop we are using different chemical fertilizers to fulfill our increase in productivity of grain they are leached out from the agricultural field go to nearby water body and affecting the aquatic ecosystem adversely. Beside, there are several effluents in nearby water body. Their effluent also contain many toxic chemicals which cause nutritional enrichment of the aquatic ecosystem. The concentration of nutrients in water body not only increase with discharge from different sources but to the seasonal variation.

These chemicals causing structural and functional change in algal blooms as luxuriant growth of different cyano bacteria and forming bollom scum on water surface of the pond, lake and reservoir.

Bloom forming cyano bacteria cause serious problem in man made and natural water bodies generally used for drinking, recreational purposes and domestic uses. Cyano bacteria are unique photosynthetic organism of great importance because of their cosmopolitan distribution in terrestrial, fresh water and marine habitats they are largely known to provide critical insight into 'origin of life, photosynthesis, nitrogen fixation and primary metabolism. Now a days they have much importance as biofertilizer. Their role user has been suggested in reclamation saline. Cyano bacterial are good source of protein.

Luxuriant growth of these cyanobacteria due to nutrient enrichments (basically N and P) not only produce toxins which cause lethal effect on different disease animals including
